Connecting Principles: Attachment

WHAT IS TBRI®?

TBRI® is an attachment-based, trauma-informed intervention designed to meet the complex needs of vulnerable children or children from “hard places.” Each of these children have experienced abuse, neglect or trauma, making it difficult to trust others. TBRI® addresses the child’s physical needs, attachment needs, and tools to disarm fear-based behaviors. TBRI is based on years of attachment, sensory processing, and neuroscience research.

The TBRI® Overview Class (Next overview class in late 2018) is a glimpse into the method as a whole and an introduction to the principles.

THE THREE TBRI® PRINCIPLES ARE

Aug. 4 - Connecting Principles (attachment)
Sept. 15 - Empowering Principles (physical needs)
Oct. 13 - Correcting Principles (behavior)

TBRI® TRAINERS

Each year mental health professionals apply for scholarships to attend an intensive TBRI® Practitioner training program at the Karyn Purvis Institute for Child Development. In 2017, Becky Marquez was selected and completed the training and is one of few practitioners in the Treasure Valley.
